

our antenatal session guide

When shall i book my antenatal appointments?

Your sessions with me can be booked whenever you feel you want/need them.

Many clients choose to have them after their 20 weeks scans, just so they have the full 'picture' to support their sessions.

You need to consider your preferences, how informed you want to be going into medical appointments and how you plan to use the support for your appointments.

We will discuss place of birth, so you may choose to have a session to ensure things can be put into place early enough for your preferences for this.

You will usually go through your birth plan at around 36 weeks with your midwife, so plan to have your birth planning session done with time to make changes etc prior to that.

The next pages give an overview of what we can discuss and you can always adapt your sessions to suit your needs.

our antenatal session outline

Session 1: Our initial formal session involves a comprehensive case history discussion including revisiting any past birth. During this process, I gather essential details that enable me to offer optimal care tailored to your pregnancy, birth, and postpartum needs. We will focus on discussing your birth preferences, providing you with ample information to make informed choices about your birthing experience. The goal is to ensure you feel confident and secure enough to create a birth plan that will be valuable for your week 36 midwife appointment.

Sessions 2-3: Engage in a hands-on practical session encompassing massage skills for labor, breath work and biomechanics designed for labor, along with additional valuable insights. Additionally, we'll explore postpartum planning, focusing on your individual needs for a successful and rejuvenating postpartum period.

Some content ideas:

Expectations of birth / experiences / current mindset / decisions you currently feel like you might like to make / birth rights / The nervous system / fear-tension-pain cycle / hypnobirthing tools / creating positive mindset / what to expect in labour / birth partner / Birth physiology / finding & following your instincts / revisit birth plan & discuss its evolution & the back up plans / induction / caesarean / newborn care / breastfeeding / bottle-feeding.

We can cover whatever is needed, but just a guide....

If you've chosen the basic birth package you have one session so please amalgamate the content to suit your needs.
